Real News or Fake News?

The Future of Journalism

Dr Margaret Van Heekeren is a journalism academic with the Department of Media and Communications at the University of Sydney. She is a founding member of the Centre for Media History, based at Macquarie University.

The recent rise in the proliferation of fake news has identified social media as an enabling factor.

However Dr Van Heekeren takes the view that this is, rather, a continuation of the historic misuse of news channels.

She argues that whilst fake news is of critical concern, it is not a death knell of journalism's future but a cyclical warning of a need to reinvigorate quality journalism.

There will be a panel discussion with Margaret after her presentation.

Come along and bring interested friends with you.

All are welcome.
